The public made Kerrigan the sweetheart of the Winter Olympics, while immediately giving Harding the cold shoulder. Other events ranged from Michael Jackson's child molestation charges to the senseless murder of Michael "Air" Jordan's father. Imagine strolling down the placid walkway of Madison's brick-clad riverfront, but seeing a floating casino rather than the Bonnie Belle. economic prosperity and the other faction predicting doom and crime. A year of firsts made the school year unique. Imagine adding an extra period to the day, yet being dismissed seven minutes earlier. A new 35minute slot, known as home-room, extended the school day to eight periods. During this time, students kept abreast of news events through Channel 1, attended club meetings and each Friday watched the school video newscast Time Out, a Journalism I and II production. The 20-minute broadcast focused on sports, student accomplishments and upcoming events. Imagine being part of a new classroom setting, minus the rambling of a lecturing teacher. Temperatures soared above the 90's, but that did not stop the Marching Cubs from their six to eight-hour practices beneath the sweltering July sun. All the exertion paid off, however, with a first place finish in the Southern Indiana Marching Band Festival, a best general effect trophy in the Jeffersonville Invitational and a trip to regionals.

Keeping with tradition, the band officially kicked off its season by heading the Madison Regatta parade in early July. For most of their performances, the 98-member group revolved both their music and show around Victory at Sea, a popular 1950 televison show about World War II. At district, the Marching Cubs captured a One rating with 56.08 points. And for the first time in four years, the band qualified for regionals where it earned a Two.

Several band students also participated in the Indiana State School Music Association District Solo and Ensemble Contest. Those meriting Division I ratings included Josh Ash, Meri Jo Wenning, Lori Cummins, Tatsuya Ishigaki, Chris Akers, Tim Webster, Amy Rowlett, Tony Clark, Greg Pimlott, Tara Nethery, Missy Callis, Christy Brown, Amanda Lyon, Heather Craig, Christina Patton and Matt Mitchell.

In celebration of Christmas, the band and choir joined forces to present the school with its first holiday convocation in almost 10 years. For an impressive finale, the band and choir performed A Jubilant Christmas.

Like in band, several choir members entered the statewide solo and ensemble contest. Those winning honors included Kasey Andress, Meredith Heiderman, Katie Wildman, Kelly Campbell, Celestra Datillo, Jessica Settlemire, Mike Sooy, Yvonne Wallace, Ken Bates, Derrick Schreiner, Jason Wallace, Mark Overton, Elana Jack, Deena Sablehaus, Kelli Youngblood, Stacey Edens, > Kristen McClelland, Amber Duprey, Barbie Ritchie, Brian Gibson, Linda Chamberlain, Robin Hossler, Amy Campbell, Adel Dobos, Lisa Maybrier, Vanetta Macrander, Annie Frazier, and Amber Pittman. In February, choir members also traveled to Chicago where they performed, plus saw the Broadway hit Phantom of the Opera.

Although the Marching Cubs had to compete in a contest in Clark County that afternoon, band members rose early to entertain at the 29th Annual Canaan Fall Festival that morning. On Senior Honor Day, the major winners included Lori Cummins and Meri Jo Wenning, Outstanding Senior Musicians; Mike Sooy, Senior Choir Award; David Hearne and Greg Pimlott, John Phillip Sousa Award; Josh Ash and Tim Webster, Director's Award; and Shawn Hall, recipient of the Troy Pyles Memorial Scholarship.

Athletics and antics took a backseat to academics for nearly three dozen students involved in scholastic competition. Spell Bowl kicked off the season with Sarah Hofferth, Mindy Aulbach, Tara Nethery, Monica Benkert and Aaron Bonnett gaining area recognition as P*E*R*F*E*C*T spellers. After practicing five days a week for almost three months, Coach Mrs. Lavonne Zimmerman led the Spell Bowl team to state competition for the sixth consecutive year. The group returned home with a second place trophy, two notches better than the year before.

Bonnett, Josh Ash and Tim Webster also merited honors three months later, when the Decathlon team placed sixth in state competition, along with eight medals. It marked the first year for Madison to vie in the large school division. According to Academic Coordinator Lorna Naylor, dedication held the key to success since Madison boasted the smallest enrollment in the category. Members generally practiced before and after school, including the unexpected four-day snow break in January. The decathletes always found an outlet for stress, however, through indoor barbeques, bagel parties and pizza deliveries.

Super Bowl consumed the first three months of second semester. With 32 dedicated students on the roster, coaches Mr. Jerry Dougan, Mrs. Naylor, Mrs. Zimmerman and newcomer Mrs. Julie Sparks sensed victory. According to Mrs. Sparks, "knowing who to play and when in such a broad topic as social studies" loomed as the biggest challenge. The all encompasing theme blazoned The Era of Man and Moon. The team boasted an unbeatable start with a first place win at the annual Scottsburg Invitational, scoring 100 points against seven other high schools. From there on, the group never let up.

> Madison later qualified three teams for the state finals. While friends and classmates prepared for prom night back in Madison, the fine arts and math teams swept to a first place finish. The English team placed fifth. Mrs. Zimmerman labeled the state championship "grueling, really grueling." A formal banquet at Hanover College in May wrapped up the year. by Jesi Brooks, TJ Ohlendorf

Some classes only dwelled on history or the abstract, but the vocational, business and industrial programs instead emphasized reality. As a result, numerous students got a head start on their career choice.

Under the direction of Mrs. Jill Deputy, only one of two female FFA teachers in the state, agriculture students enjoyed a busy, productive year. The four classes focused on farming fundamentals, mineral science, plants, soil testing and sound business principles. Other program activities ranged from growing plants in water to raising 200 tolapia, a warm water fish, in a 750 gallon tank.

The 14 students in the PVE program kept busy by working in the IMC, helping in the cafeteria or by being a custodian for a few periods. Some students traveled to neighboring E.O. Muncie Elementary to work in the cafeteria there, while Scott Branstetter and Shannon Colber participated in the graphic arts program. At Christmas, students made ornaments for teachers, plus hosted an open house.

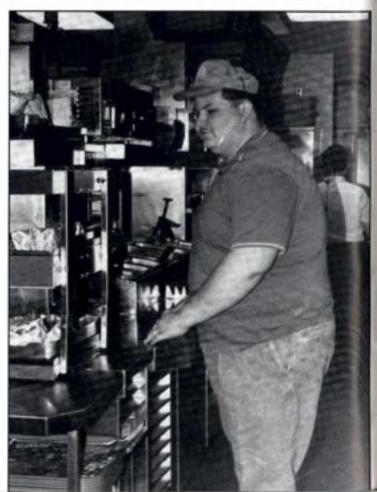

In the automotive area, the school received a 1993 Buick Park Avenue Ultra, compliments of Demaree Motors and General Motors Inc. Faculty members used the $32,000 car to help familiarize students with the mechanics and computerized features of 1990's cars. The school, however, could only use the luxury machine for instructional purposes and could not allow the car to be driven off the school grounds nor have it licensed. Except for the car, the industrial, business and automotive areas received little equipment due to the $3.4 million technology wing, scheduled for groundbreaking in October 1994.

Twenty-three students got a head start on job marketing skills through the DECA program, plus participated in numerous conferences. According to Adviser Mr. Darryl Smith, "For me personally, the group's maintenance of Michigan Road Hill was our most gratifying project.

> Besides helping environmentally, it showed the students' pride in their community." Hard work and dedication also contributed to VICA's successful year. New teacher Michael Turner headed the program, which too extended a charitable hand to Jefferson County families with holiday food baskets. Half-day assignments gave VICA students insight into procedures and operations of local industries and businesses.

With the rising cost of printing, journalism teacher Rosalind E. Harrell needed to find a more efficient and cheaper way of reporting the news. Two years ago the Journalism I class temporarily took over a dving video production from another MCHS group and renamed it Time Out News. This fall, Mrs. Harrell decided to revive Time Out News as a partial substitute for the newspaper. The Journalism I and II classes produced 24 shows that lasted approximately 20-25 minutes each. The broadcasts aired every Friday during homeroom period.

Because of the high cost of printing, the journalism classes went from producing eight papers to three large issues, with the last edition being 32 pages. Darren Aldridge, Clint Barnes, Sarah Bear, Ryan Bell, Christy Canida, Amanda Evans, Brandi Hearne, Kris Kalb, Sara Key, Claudia King, Darrin Long, Elissa Miller, Karen Roark, Aubrey Schroeder, and Michelle Shelton made up the Journalism I class. Journalism II students included Jesi Brooks, Brande Butler, Josh Newell, TJ Ohlendorf, Jenny Prime, Tyson Skinner, Amy Vaughn, Brad Vest and Patrick West. In late August, capturing the memories of the year became the job of the 1994 Mahisco yearbook staff, consisting of nine seniors and three juniors. To complete the task in style, Mrs. Harrell selected from a field of applicants Jennifer Foley, Kim Cantrell, Tiffany Cole, Kari Flood, Maleesa Flowers, Cara Hancock, Roxanne Stephens, Nikki Green, Jennifer Straub, Jamin Tuttle, Amy Wickersham and Holly Risk. The journalism classes took an array of cultural and social outings. In December, 19 students enjoyed dinner at Louisville's Spaghetti Factory and the two person play, The Gift of the Magi. In February, 25 journalists enjoyed orchestra level seats for the Broadway hit Phantom of the Opera. In late March, the students headed to Louisville again.

> This time to see David Copperfield's Bevond Imagination. Madison journalism became part of the show when he invited Cole to join him on stage and called on Canida, Kalb and Tuttle from the audience. Students boarded the yellow bus one more time to attend Ball State Journalism Day. To celebrate the end of the year, the journalists enjoyed lunch together.

J-II students TJ Ohlendorf and Patrick West anchor the news segment for Time Out. Ohlendorf also attended summer J-clinics at Ball State and Indiana universities, plus won a one-week summer internship with a Louisville, KY medium. On Senior Honor Day, Ohlendorf and Josh Newell received the Journalism II medals.

The Language Arts Department received $77,000 in high-tech additions this year. It began in foreign language with the purchase of an audio lab. The mobile console could be passed among Spanish, French and German classes. According to program leader Mrs. Barbara Hill, the new facility enabled students to hear native languages better and allowed teachers to work individually with students. For its writing lab, the department also acquired 25 computers. The new Macintosh LCIII's and 520's enabled students to produce a more professional product for their classes.

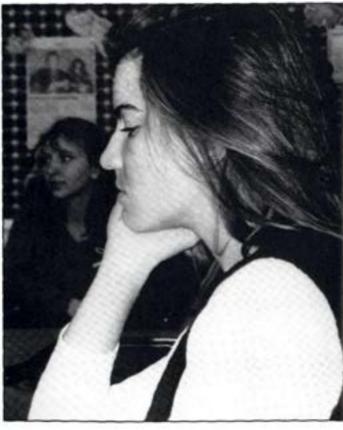

The Language Arts Department also sponsored numerous field trips. All senior English and American Studies classes went to Actors' Theatre of Louisville to see To Kill a Mockinghird. Junior English and the honors sophomore classes also traveled to Louisville to view a performance of the Tour De Force Chamber Repertory Theatre's performance of The Fall of the House of Usher, An Occurrance at Owl Creek Bridge, The Mouse, The Most Dangerous Game and Ransom of Red Chief. American Studies and drama attended a showing of The Sound of Music at the Derby Dinner Playhouse. Later, the same groups traveled to American Cabaret Theatre to see Voices of a Generation.

While the Language Arts Department concentrated on the arts, the Social Studies Department stayed in tune with current events and guest speakers. Students also competed for Student Government Day positions and History Day honors. Program Leader Mr. Jim Caudill explained that Student Government Day allowed students to observe the operation and responsibility of city government. In History Day competition, 25 juniors qualified for state. Those winning at the area level included Monica Benkert, Celestra Dattilo, Robin

From learning how to use scuba diving equipment to mastering sophisticated computer software, students all over the school got a chance to experience extraordinary events in ordinary classes.

In the science department, students dissected frogs in Mr. Dan Herron's biology class. The project prompted mixed emotions, from I'm gonna hurl to I want to do another one. In another biology class, 14 students ventured to the Florida Keys with teacher Jerry Ison over spring break to learn and enjoy the art ofscuba diving. Recapping the adventure, senior Michael Eades noted, "It was great. It was nice to get away and swim in the warm water." Biology wasn't the only course with out-of-class learning. Chemistry students traveled to Carrollton, KY to tour the laboratories at Dow Corning. Science teacher Mrs. Susan Robinson noted the trip impressed students as they saw the application of chemistry "in the real world."

Math students competed in several contests throughout the year, including National Math and the Indiana Math League which involves six separate tests. Madison does well every year, placing first in their regional the last couple of years. Mathmatica, new computer program installed over spring break, enabled students to get a leg up on math, from calculus to physics.

The business, industrial and technical areas spent most of the year planning for their new $3.4 million wing. According to Program Leader Michael Turner, the many new courses and equipment will give students a "smorgasbord curriculum," plus better prepare them for entrylevel careers. Many of the classes will go on line in 1994-95, but several will have to wait unti the wing's completion in 1996-97. The new facility will sport four computer labs, as well as house the printing/graphic arts, automotive/transportation, CAD/drafting, home economics and agriculture programs. When school ended in June, 24 outdated Apple IIe computers also exited with students. PowerMACS and laser printers replaced the vintage machines.

All too often students get tired of sitting in a classroom all day. Relief was not too hard to achieve, however, with Madison Consolidated offering many classes that did not require a desk.

Graphic Arts, a two period course, taught students printing and desktop publishing skills. Instructor Paul Meyer stated that the course definitely gaves students an employment edge in today's high-tech world. Classes worked on in-house productions for Madison Consolidated Schools, as well as created personalized notepads, business cards, Christmas cards, resumes and sports program covers.

Mr. Gary O'Neal taught the class most popular with sophomores - Drivers Education. Eager to get their licenses, students seldom voiced any complaints. The course offered a lot more than just a credit toward graduation or a good grade. Eager to gain independence on the open road, students learned on the simulator system which relied on visual films and the Drivers Education car. The course required that students operate an automatic transmission approximately 12 times and a standard transmission twice for a total of three driving hours.

Students appreciated the new walkway between the cafeteria and the senior hallway on the south side of the school, thanks to Mr. Mike Frazier's carpentry class. The carpentry students also constructed picnic tables for E.O. Muncie Elementary and assisted with props for the all school play.

Students also enjoyed the chance to burn off stress in Miss Michelle Ward's and Mr. Al Wilcox's physical education classes. Activities ranged from tennis to football, volleyball, wrestling, basketball, tumbling/ dance, floor hockey, weight training, softball, track/field and frisbee.

> Art classes provided a place to slow down while expressing the creative side. During the year, various works of art decorated display cases in the school's hallways.

Cast members agree that there's

No Business Like Show Business

n mid-April, shots rang out in Opal E. Sherman Auditorium. The musical Annie Get Your Gun by Irving Berlin finally arrived. About 60 students united to perform four shows. Marking the largest cast in years, the musical differed from the past, with eight of the roles double-casted. Set in the Old West, the musical comedy revolved around the life of the first female sharpshooter -

Annie Oakley.

Senior Dean Devore, as Colonel Buffalo Bill Cody, discovers the best shot around. Annie, played by seniors Meredith Heiderman and Kelly Campbell, beats the Wild West Show's headliner in a clay pigeon shoot off. From there, she heads for the world of show business. During the tour, the great spiritual leader Sitting Bull adopts Annie as his daughter. The sharpshooter falls head over heels in love with her leading marksman, Frank Butler played by senior Mike Sooy. But Annie soon learns she can't get a man with a gun. And in the end, the star throws a shoot off to win Frank's affection.

A musical would not be possible without a few helping hands. Fifteen students worked in the backstage, lighting, and sound effects crew. "It's hard because the switches and dials are separate. So you have to run back and forth to change the lights," said junior Tony Clark. Senior Lori Spry received the job of stage manager. Keeping 75 people under control was no easy task. "It's a difficult job, but someone has to do it. I'm glad I did because in the end it was well worth it," stated Spry.

Another senior Tatsuya Ishigaki made his musical debut. He not only took part in the Indian ensemble but also played the role of two different Indians, Yellow Foot and Wild Horse. "I wish I tried out for the musical sooner. It was hard work, but still lots of fun," remarked Ishigaki.

Professional dancer and actor Bill McKinley of Indianapolis headed the choreography. Mr. McKinley, who taught the cast the dance steps to a classical waltz, released an album in May and was rumored to have done some of the voices for the Disney movie The Lion King. But fact never accompanied the rumor.

The musical featured some fun and very memorable moments, especially for the Indian ensemble. During the school performance, Matt Mitchell, Ishigaki, Matt Clapp and Will Konkle missed their cue and left the girl Indians on stage by themselves. Then immediately after their dance, everybody was rushed to shelter because of a tornado warning. "I'll always remember that performance and singing Kum By Ya in the girls restroom," commented sophomore Elana Jack.

Without saving a word on stage. Stephanic Wilson performed a major role in the musical. The senior designed all but two props, the boat and the caboose. The entire job took 14 weeks. The last month before performance, Wilson often spent 30 hours a week working on the sets. However, this Honor Thespian did not work alone. She enjoyed good help from juniors Willie Robbins and Mindy Aulbach and sophomore Ira Whitacre. "The funniest thing I'll remember is the time Willie and Mindy got into a wheat paste fight." reminisced Wilson.

The senior not only designed props but acted as well. Earlier in her high school career, she performed in Arsenic and Old Lace, plus earned a role in Our Town fall semester. The student also participated in Drama Club, serving as vice- president this year. Wilson plans to major in theatre set design at Indiana State University for one year and then transfer to Indiana University.

Couples look Wonderful Tonight as they

n April 30, after months of planning, average boys and girls transformed into gentlemen in tuxedoes and ladies with elegant dresses. Prom finally arrived with all its glitz and glamour.

Several months before the wonderful night, girls started to search high and low for that perfect dress with all the right accessories. Branching away from the norm of store bought dresses, Molly Pedigo had a dress custom made for her. "I saw a dress in a magazine that I liked and Mom found a similiar pattern, so we just designed how I wanted it. What is really cool is that I'll get a lot of use out of it," remarked Pedigo. The senior's mother, who started the dress a week before prom, also had the difficult task of sewing sequined applique in the shape of roses onto the bodice.

For most girls, numerous hours went into the process of getting ready. Some had their hair, make-up, or nails professionally done. Senior Stacy Estes sat in a salon for two hours getting her hair styled. "They had five people working on my hair and at least two at all times. So in all, it took me three hours to get ready," she said. But for most guys, the big night required 25-60 minutes at the most.

Glistening with red and black decorations, the J. Graham Brown Student Center at Hanover College provided an elegant setting. Everyone danced the night away to songs ranging from Cantaloope by US3 to Now and Forever by Richard Marx. As the theme Wonderful Tonight played, couples danced cheek to cheek and held each other tight.

Anything from breaking a nail to spilling a drink on the fancy dresses or tuxes could happen on prom night. Junior James Davis recalled such a mishap, "It just finished raining and my girlfriend tried to step over a puddle. And when she did the slit of her dress went from three inches above the knee to 10! Luckily my morn was able to make a temporary fix on it."

Anticipating the moment when someone would become royalty, people glanced at their watches waiting for the hour of 11. Nominees for princess were Sarah Bear, Robin Hossler, Krisie Lock, Tabi Lytle, Marlene Thorne and Amy Vaughn. Gentlemen competing for prince included Allen Abbott, Gage Brogan, Jeremy Getz, Travis Inskeep, Jason Perry and Greg Thomas. Hossler and Perry reign as 1994 prom princess and prince. Queen candidates included Tiffany Cole, Nikki Green, Beth Horine, Jana Jenkins, Daina Laswell and TJ Ohlendorf. King nominees were Christian Cheatham, Tom Cheatham, Michael Eades, Joey Lauderbaugh, Josh Newell and Brian Scroggins. Lauderbaugh won king honors while Green captured the title of royalty for the second time.

Senior Scott Ross, who captured prince honors in 1993, crowm junior Robin Hossler as princess 1994. For most juniors and seniors, prom ranked as the highlight of the year. After months of preparation, the hard work paid off for the junior prom committee.

According to co-sponsors Mrs. Nancy Cheatham and Mr. Dick Craft, this year's prom, Wonderful Tonight, cost approximately $4,000. The charge covered everything from the rent of the building to the DJ, souvenir glasses, invitations, scrolls, engraved napkins, decorations, catering, flowers and gifts for the king, queen, prince and princess candidates.

The junior class raised the money through magazine sales. Underclassmen who did not reach a certain goal, had to buy their tickets. But all seniors received complimentary admission.

For the past two years, prom has been held at Honover College's J. Graham Brown Campus Center. The Madison Moose Lodge and Connor K. Salm Gymnasium have served as host sites for past proms, but students prefer Hanover College for its elegant touch.

Honor Day salutes seniors

As 1994 Winds Down

ver 400 guests, a shorter agenda and nearly $44,000 in club and community grants contributed to the success of Senior Honor Day. Almost everyone earned some type of award or recognition during the 3.5 hour program. Besides the local scholarships, the 224-member class also earned $28,400 from state and national agencies. And individual colleges conferred $65,650 to defray post-secondary costs the first year. Some of the major award winners included Amy Robinson, Most Likely to Succeed, Tri-Kappa, Rotary, Lotz Scholarship, DAR, National Honor Society, Student Council and Lugar Leadership. Michael Andrew also captured several awards including Class Flirt, Lotz Scholarship, National Honor Society, Robert Byrd Scholarship, National Merit and the President's Academic Award. Three or more awards went to Tammi Stewart, Joey Risk, TJ Ohlendorf, Kelly Eagleson, Monica Tatera, Joshua Ash, Christian Cheatham, Brian Scroggins, Mike Sooy, Lori Cummins, Kari Flood, Greg Pimlott, Aaron Bonnett, Tim Webster, Maleesa Flowers, Josh Sherman, Josh Newell, Kelly Campbell and Amy Wickersham.

About half way through the program, the choir under the direction of Mrs. Lynn Maricle, entertained the crowd. In addition, Cummins performed a solo on the saxophone and Sooy sang You Got A Friend. The two entertainers also earned recognition from Mrs. Maricle and Band Director John Schreiber for their achievement and contribution to the MCHS music program.

Major award winners in the academic segment of the program included English - Pimlott, Sherman and Tatera; Spanish -Campbell, Beth Hughes, Stephanie Nolan and Pimlott; French -Cummins, Bonnett and Krista Newcom: Science - Andrew, Ash and Robinson; Math - Ash and Tatsuya Ishigaki; Social Studies and Psychology - Tatera; American History - Newell; Computerized Accounting - Tammy Boggs; Business/Administrative Support Services - Melissa Erwin; Building Trades - Rick Blaylock; Graphics - Donnie Hay, Joe Kramer, Alison Sage and Stephanie Wilson; Best Industrial - Eric Handlon; Agriculture - Billy Applegate and Brent Lindquist; Art/Best Overall - Barry Speer; Outstanding Senior Musicians - Cummins and Wenning; Home Economics - Blythe Pugh and Gwen Feutz; Journalism - Ohlendorf and Newell; Yearbook - Flowers; ICE/ICT - Angela Geyman and Michael True; Marketing Education - Micah Downing and Monique Scroggin; Outstanding Madison Vocational Student at Southeastern Career Center - Iran Rogers; Programming - Michelle Hall, Jeremy Lynch, Stephanic Nolan, Israel O'Neal and Sherman; and Drafting/CAD - Gretchen Rimstidt.

Hoop Time. These words prompted most people to get a little wired. Basketball to many loomed more than just a game, but a passion. For seniors Tony Ralston and Shane Cahall, it meant five months of arguing with Andy

Lutz and Bryan Copeland about which team reigned supreme. the Indiana Hoosiers or Kentucky Wildcats. Ralston and Cahall would espouse the Hoosiers, but Lutz and Copeland would maintain the Wildcats. And numerous others held different opinions. Troy Righthouse always retaliated that Tennessee and All-star Dale Ellis were the greatest. However, Tyson Skinner and Candi Stiver pledged their loyalty to Denny Crum and the Louisville Cardinals. Some people even ventured as far as to chant for the Arkansas Razorbacks, as did Steve Scroggins. Meanwhile Shawn Keitzman and Clint Barnes veered to the East Coast to support the Georgetown Hoyas and Duke Blue Devils. Faithful to her home state. Amy Wickersham supported the UCLA Bruins. And for Wesley Lawson, the North Carolina Tarheels dominated all others. But Gretchen Rimstidt, however, showed enthusiasm for Glen Robinson and the Purdue Boilermakers. Regardless of choice, fans all had one thing in common, the love of the game.

n mid-January, seniors got a four-day break from classes due to a big 8-10 inch snow fall and record setting temperatures that plummeted to -25 degrees. Winter Storm'94 marked Madison's first big snow since 1978 when schools closed for a month. Seniors immediately raised the question whether they would receive a state waiver from making up lost time.

Most spent the days off by catching up on sleep, skiing, sledding down the biggest hills that could be found, to just watching popular movies such as The Firm, Sleepless In Seattle and Trespass. But like many who reside on country roads, senior Angela Geyman commented, "With all the snow, I couldn't really do anything, so I just sat at home bored." Treacherous road conditions left a lot of people at home. People who set out to go shopping locally or out of town found an awkward situation. Madison stores closed early and highways leading to Louisville, KY and Clarksville left mall shopping out of the question. Kentucky Gov. Breton Jones also limited options, as he closed all Kentucky interstates. But five days later, students returned to school to proceed with regular activities. Even though it meant doing homework and taking tests, seniors appreciated being back. The missed time later forced school officials to change graduation from May 29 to June 5.

hile many seniors were soaking up the sun, playing ball or working last summer, Monica Tatera was going to symphonics and ballets and picking strawberries in the fields of Russia. Tatera said she went to the Soviet Union because she knew it would be different.

The student stayed with a Russian family for five weeks. She spent one week in St. Petersburg, two weeks in the country and the rest in Moscow.

"It was wonderful," commented Tatera. "The people in Russia are very free in everything they do. There are few laws or restrictions and everywhere you go there were street musicians, especially in the underground passages to the subways."

Tatera said nothing earthshattering happened during her stay, but she had a lot of fun experiences. One of her favorites occurred when she and her host brother and sister went to visit some friends in Moscow. "We were on our way home and it had been lightly raining, and then it started to rain hard. My host brother and I ran around in the streets jumping in puddles. On one street, the water was up to our knees," she fondly recalled. The senior said she would not hesitate to visit Russia again. "Everyone should learn the culture of other countries," she said.

ne of 354 youths nationwide, Michael Eades over the summer attended the National Young Leaders Conference in Washington D.C.

Eades' entire trip focused on government operation, legislative procedure and historical salutes. He heard numerous speakers, participated in a mock congressional session and toured historical sites such as the Smithsonian Institute, Iwo Jima Memorial and the White House. A timely venture included watching the Ruth Ginsburg committee hearings on Capitol Hill. For Eades, favorite experiences ranged from attending Sheer Madness at Kennedy Center to visiting different embassies and eating breakfast at the National Press Club. Some of his famous encounters included Ginsburg, nominee for U.S. Supreme Court Justice: Sen. Ted Kennedy of Massachusetts; Indiana's Rep. Lee Hamilton; Mr. Michael Duffy of Time magazine; Ms. Helen Thomas of United Press International; Rep. Rod Grams of Minnesota; and Mr. Tony Snow, George Bush's Read My Lips speech writer. Eades, who said he might go into politics eventually, plans to attend the U.S. Coast Guard Academy in Connecticut upon graduation. Of all his experiences, the senior reflected that a wreathlaying ceremony at the Grave of the Unknown Soldier touched him the most.

A lthough the Soviet Union loomed thousands of miles away, its language and customs were only a phone call away for Daniel Jenkins. The senior studied Russian through IHETS, the first satellite course ever to be offered at MCHS.

At 12 noon on Monday, Wednesday, and Fridays, the Russian 101 class was broadcasted from Muncie, IN to MCHS and three other neighboring schools for one hour. Jenkins viewed the program on live television and talked to the professor in Muncie by way of a special phone. All tests, quizzes, and homework were either faxed or sent by mail to facilitator Mrs. Alanagh Pimlott, who then gave them to Jenkins on the appropriate days. The senior called the option a very efficient way of learning. "You have the advantage of being the only person in the classroom and therefore you receive more attention from your teacher," he reflected.

Mrs. Tamara Kurmanaeva, a native Russian and wife of a Hanover College mathematics professor, also volunteered two days a week to help Jenkins practice his pronunciation and acquaint him with the Russian culture. The senior expressed pleasure that the school offered the course because he was afraid he wouldn't have the chance to take the language until college.

Ven as a kid, Michael Sooy dazzled people with his vocal talent. Unlike most children just beginning to construct their first phrases, Sooy sang his first solo in church at the young age of two.

And now 16 years later, Sooy has qualified as the first person from Madison Consolidated High School to make the Indiana All-State Choir four years in a row. The senior competed against 200 other students to capture the special distinction. which secured him a spot in an elite quartet. But Sooy already knew the feeling of winning. His previous credits included four first place finishes at the Indiana State Fair, as well as an appearance at the national talent review in Peoria, IL. From the fair, he placed one spot away from going to national competition in Memphis, TN. Aside from state performances, he also sang the national anthem regularly at the Madison boys and girls basketball games. Sooy, however, doesn't take all the glory for his success. The senior quickly credits his family and local musician Archie Coons whom he called "one of the best piano teachers around."

The musician admitted that he sometimes gets a butterfly or two in his stomach before going on stage. But it doesn't stop him from doing what he does best - performing. The senior plans to major in music at college.

From saving money for college and car payments to simply having more independence, many seniors held part-time jobs after an eight period day of school. While all worked for the same reason - money, how they got it differed. Tara Jester who worked as a cashier at the Sirloin Stockade commented that she liked her job because the managers were fun to work with and "treated you like human beings."

Most students worked 15 to 25 hours a week, making $4.35 per hour on an average. Payday kept everyone going through the week. When the check reached students' hands, it either went straight to the bank or to clothing stores and music shops.

But, employment often interrupted social life. Friends were hard to fit in the schedule, when attending school and working. Chris Hamilton, who worked at the Jay C Food Store said he wasn't always able to do what he wanted or be with his friends as much. On the other hand, Joey Risk devoted his senior year to his studies and only worked during the summers as a lifeguard at Crystal Beach. "Students shouldn't work on week nights if they don't need to, because school is far more important," stated Risk.

basketball a step up. The two participated in multi-leagues, ranging from AAU, summer clinics to school teams. Their roundball fame began in Summer 1992, when both competed in the 16-under AAU tournament which led them to Indianapolis and later Baton Rouge, LA. There they helped their team capture two victories, including the national championship. In addition, the duo also attended the Nike Invitational in Las Vegas, NV. These credentials naturally helped Perry and Inskeep win the attention of sports publications as well as several college scouts. Evans noted the ongoing building project attempts to restore pride among the villagers. "The experience left me very fulfilled and really made me feel like I had done something good," commented the junior. The travelers re-united Feb. 5 to discuss how the trip affected their lives. Evans stated, "It was nice to see everyone again. You'd be amazed how close you get on a four-day bus trip to and from Mexico. Everyone was really nice."

Her friends call her Katie, but many theater patrons know her as Sarah, Kim, or Dolly. Ever since the eighth grade, Katie Wildman has performed in every MCHS musical - from Guys and Dolls, Bye Bye Birdie to Annie Get Your Gun. Over the years, the sophomore has also acted in several other productions, including Sound of Music and some Salvation Army plays. She also serves as a technical worker for MOVAC, the Madison Ohio Valley Arts Council.

Besides her theatrical involvement this year, Wildman also participated in solo and ensemble competition. Her winning style resulted in a Division One (the best) rating at state. Wildman also sings at her church, Calvary Baptist. "It makes me feel like I'm doing something good with my talent," the sophomore said.

While many students owned Shelties, Labs or Golden Retrievers, sophomore Emily Hoban held a special interest in llamas, a South American animal known for its soft, fleecy wool. Hoban and her family adopted the hobby three years ago when they purchased a farm off State Road 7 that featured Ilamas. The Hobans liked the animals so much that they bought some of their own. As of mid-March, the Hobans owned 28. The sophomore each day feeds, brushes, and cleans the animals, which often approach five feet tall. Proud of their collection, the family takes the llamas to approximately four shows a year, she said. The animals, rare to Jefferson County, also attract a lot of local visitors, especially preschoolers, kindergarteners and first-graders. Hoban stated, "Overall they are real neat and I thoroughly enjoy them!"

After a 30-year teaching career at Madison Consolidated, Mr. Lou Knoble retired in June. The art instructor also coached crosscountry 25 of those years.

In March and April, homework frequently took a backseat to prom shopping. Tonya Strahle, Celestra Dattilo and Robin Hossler, however, enjoy the time-consuming task.

"The one thing I will remember about my senior year is having graduation delayed because we had to make up snow days."

Tyson Skinner

Elissa Miller relies on cold, soft drinks to combat the 95-98 degree weather that hit in May and June.

"Our senior class always had bad things happened to it. Our 9th grade trip to Washington, DC was canceled and then graduation got delayed." Angie Geyman Jamin Tuttle uses the new 40minute homeroom slot to work in the yearbook darkroom.

A Christmas gift with a personal touch brings an emotional OOOOH from senior Cathy Hall.

Confident of victory, Tony Ralston, Scott Ross, Kevin Risk, Greg Thomas, Michael Eades and Andy Lutz leave no doubt about their team allegiance. School spirit soared when the Cubs captured the sectional basketball crown. Photo by Jesi Brooks

The second half of the school year. Following tradition, all upperclassmen suffered from senioritis. Imagine MCHS without the efficient and cheerful leadership of Principal Roger Gallatin. This almost occurred when he declared early retirement intentions in mid-March. Opposed to seeing him go, colleagues and administrators convinced Mr. Gallatin to stick around, at least until the completion of the school's $9.4 million renovation project. Imagine the relaxation everyone felt during the oneweek snow break in January. But then imagine senior disappointment when graduation had to be postponed one week, a first in school history. The retirement of popular teachers Mr. Lou Knoble (art) and Herr Doug Siefert (German) also prompted emotions. Their likeable, personality traits will linger on for a long time, especially Mr. Siefert's dry wit and funny horse stories and Mr. Knoble's wild ties, bright tennis shoes and microphone screams.

> National news turned to California in April, with the death of Richard Nixon, America's only president ever to resign from office. Americans felt pity for his death, but still remembered the Watergate scandal that rocked the nation in 1972. With nearly 450 in attendance, the junior class sponsored the final event of the year, Prom 1994. The theme of the pt evening. Wonderful Tonight elegant evening, Wonderful Tonight, reflected everyone's feelings. Within days, we closed the book on another year, a wonderful year. Imagine...

Only minutes prevail before Daina Laswell and Dianna Burton become high school graduates, ending a 13-year journey.

Melissa Sonner proudly dons her National Honor Society cape.

Kasey Andress' witty antics prompt a laugh from friend Jodi Risk.

Reality suddenly hits prospective graduate Kelly Eagleson when class sponsors announce "time to line up." Imagine the happy thoughts of the 224 students belonging to the Class of 1994. Their 13-year journey would end within minutes. Tomorrow would bring a new path. They could only Imagine the destination.

The 1994 Mahisco was coordinated and produced by students enrolled in the Journalism Yearbook class. All staff members assisted in advertising and subscription sales, as well as club coverage and advertising pagination. During the summer, Amy Wickersham attended the Ball State Journalism Workshop where she capture an Excellence in Design Award. Students produced most of the photography, plus secured professional assistance from Mr. Phil Allen of Cameo Color of Columbus, IN, The Madison Courier and Mr. Gary McClurg of Olan Mills. Mr. Jeff Gabbard of Walsworth Publishing Co. of Marceline, MO served as printing representative. The 12-member staff prepared the book entirely via computerization utilizing the Macintosh desktop publishing system.
