Academics

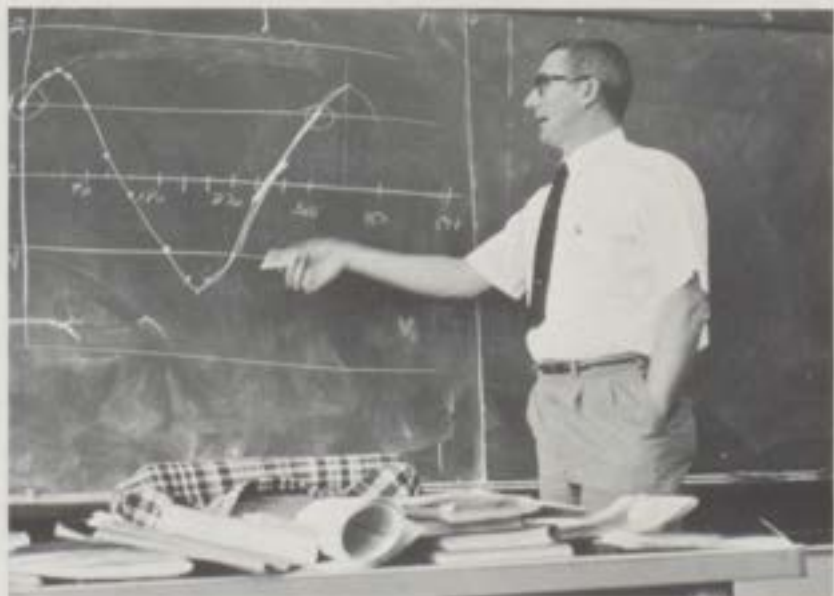

At right: Danny Royalty observes a paramecium in Biology II lab.

Science and Math

(Below) The coefficient of friction on an inclined plane was the subject of this physics experiment by Jim Singer.

A day in the life of a Science and Math student at Southwestern may go something like this!

First, to Mr. Finnegan's room for a lecture in trigonometry and a test on the problems discussed for the day. Then on to physics for a discussion on changing Fahrenheit temperatures to Centigrade. In lab, there will be an experiment that, with luck, doesn't blow the roof off the building.

The rest of the day is much the same, with courses varying according to the grade the student is in. These might contain the above-mentioned trig and physics with chemistry, biology I & II, geometry, and physical science. Students have a wide choice from which to choose.

English

Since no one graduates without encountering English courses, this department has been designed to give students a varied choice of study. English courses include not only the required literature and grammar, but also speech, composition, and journalism. Activities which are an important part of these courses involve plays, poetry readings, and work in publications.

Foreign Language

Learning to speak, read, and write in a language other than that which is native to them is an accomplishment of those students who study a foreign language. Two-year courses in French, Spanish, and Latin prove helpful as well as challenging to the students who pursue them.

Art, Music, and Social Studies

Development of creative ideas, skills, and interpretations are emphasized to students enrolled in humanities courses at Southwestern.

In art classes, the use of live models helps students gain an eye for artistic forms. Another form of art, sculpture, is learned by working with papier-mache.

Social studies classes involve themselves in the present problems of today's society. Discussions concerning urban problems in relation to the American Negro, talks on welfare and on the role of the police, take place frequently.

The skill obtained in music, whether it be choral singing or the technique of a band instrument, is treasured by those who have mastered it. The band and choral club provide students with an opportunity to become adept in music. Concert music, ensembles such as the pep band and brass choir, and student conducting broaden the scope of music for young musicians.

Industrial Arts

Industrial Arts classes consist of woodworking and drafting and are offered to any boy in high school. Students taking woodworking undertake projects such as the building of coffee tables, deacon's benches, and other home furnishings. Those boys enrolled in drafting learn to use various drafting instruments, scales, and measuring equipment. Under the direction of Mr. Jennings, industrial art students have produced many useful, and lovely projects.

Home Economics

Five Home Economics courses were taught this year by Mrs. Green. These included the usual freshmen, sophomore, junior, and senior classes and a family living course which was introduced this year. The Home Ec. room which was formerly the band room, is located in the gym. It is furnished with six kitchen units, 14 sewing machines, and four work tables. The freshmen and sophomore classes spend most of the first semester cooking, while the juniors study family relations during the year. Starting the second semester, the freshmen, sophomores, and seniors put the sewing machines to good use by making clothing from sportswear to dressy dresses. The new family living class studies food nutrition, cooking, budgeting, and care of clothing.

Physical Education

Getting used to running around in gym suits and gym shorts was one of the problems of being a freshman. Physical education, which is required for all freshmen, kept them busy dodging people as well as dodgeballs, in hopes no one would see them. The girls, taught by Miss Porter, participated in many games, including volley ball, basketball, and baseball. Exercising and jumping on the trampoline also was part of the year. The boys, directed by Mr. Montgomery, did exercises, lifted weights, and played volleyball and basketball.

Vocational Agriculture

Vocational agriculture is a subject which covers the numerous phases of modern farming. The boys enrolled in the class quickly learn the fundamentals of good farming. The instructors, Mr. Huffman and Mr. Harmon, supervise the boys as they progress during the year.

The average agriculture student's environmental surroundings are mixed among crops, livestock, and farm machinery. The boys learn the proper procedures for care of these things. They also study soil conservation, in order to preserve better soil for better crops.

Business Education

The business curriculum consists of bookkeeping, shorthand, typing I and II, business law and general business.

In bookkeeping class they are taught how to keep accurate records. In shorthand the girls learn how to take fast letters and how to type them. Typing in both I and II classes is made up of typing letters, cards, notes, and term papers. Business law is mainly a study of different types of laws and contracts. General business concerns buying stock and checking accounts.

Vocational School

Many students from Southwestern, along with students from 13 other schools, participate in the Southeastern Indiana Area Vocational School at Versailles. The purpose of the school is to help students who are not going to college to acquire a suitable vocation. Juniors and seniors are eligible, and they attend the vocational school in the morning, with their afternoon classes at Southwestern. There are as many as thirty different vocations taught at Versailles. The vocations favored most by SWHS students are beauty culture, business, drafting, electronics, auto mechanics, nursing or culinary arts.

Organizations

With Increased Vocal Support Pep Club

Top: The Pep Club anxiously awaits the start of the Southwestern-Switzerland Co. game, probably their only quiet moment of the evening.

and Cheerleaders Yell Louder, Longer

With approximately twenty more pairs of lungs than last year, the Pep Club of the 1968-69 season was the biggest and the loudest in the history of Southwestern. Led by junior varsity cheerleaders Beth Haverkamp, Marci Server, Linda Nichols, and Diane Vaughan, and varsity cheerleaders April Daugherty, Karen Fields, Connie Fox, and Donnetta Schiphorst, the Pep Club yelled out cheer after cheer for the mighty Rebels. Freshmen helped to raise the number of members to 100 this year, with more boys than ever before becoming members of the club. New yells to suppr the Rebels to V.I.C.T.O.R.Y. were used, with a touch of LAUGH-IN added as in "Sock it to 'em," which soon became the theme. Old faithfuls weren't forgotten though, and were very much in use. Spirit, the very essence of a Pep Club, was indeed evident. Officers for the year were Wanda Smith, president; Candi Bonsett, vice-pres.; Betty Wehner and Anna Traugott, secretaries; and Cheryl Rogers, treasurer.

Left: On a field trip, Dennis Wise and Ronnie Harson inspect corn stalks for evidence of corn-borers. During the summer of '68, Mike Roberts and Charlie Singer attend an FFA Leadership Camp at Lincoln State Park.

With their eyes on a future as farmers, the F.F.A. members had a busy 68-69 season. Lead by Mr. Dean Huffman, vocational agriculture teacher and F.F.A. sponsor, and Danny Royalty, President. The club was a success in having two turkey shoots around Christmas time to raise money for the club. As the year progressed, the boys entered cattle, swine and dairy judging contests. They also went to Louisville on a field trip to watch a farm machinery show. With this advanced training combine with their own ideas, these boys work to become better farmers.

Candle Sale Highlights Society's Year

Working to uphold the academic standards of the school and providing service to the school were the goals of the SWHS Honor Society during the year. In '68-'69 the members sold scented candles at Christmas to provide money for their many activities. A large part of it was donated to the Mary E. Patterson scholarship fund. Plans were made to use the remainder to buy honor blazers for the senior members. All hand work deserves reward, so a party was planned at the home of the sponsor, Mr. David Mount. Regular meetings were held once a month, providing a chance for informal get-togethers after the formal meeting.

Chorus Acquires New Teacher, Schedule

Change was the word for the Southwestern High Chorus during 1968-69. Chorus acquired a new schedule, a new practice room, and a new instructor, Mrs. Sprague. Instead of meeting two days per week, they met five. After many hours of learning and perfecting their songs, members get a chance to show off their finished work at special assemblies, such as the Christmas program and graduation.

FBLA Sponsors Chase, Dance, and Sales

With the purpose of promoting future leaders in business, the FBLA, although few in members, was kept busy with many projects and activities.

Sponsored by Mr. Hicks, the season opened with a get-together of members at a wiener roast to plan the year's activities.

A Sadie Hawkins Day skit and dance was the result of the planning. The skit, a portrayal from the comic strip Li'l Abner, written by Al Capp, was presented to the student body, with a chase afterward. Girls chased and tried to catch the boys they had wanted to date all year. If they caught their prey, they tagged them. The girls then invited the boys on a date for which the girls paid. Most of the couples went to the Sadie Hawkins Dance.

A successful money making project was the selling of ball point pens to the student body. These pens, with the basketball schedule on them came in handy for writing, and for keeping track of ball games.

Members attend the annual spring convention at Ball State University in Muncie.

Although few in number, the 1968-69 FBLA was engaged in many projects. Officers were: Mike Bozworth, president; Mark Myers, v. president; Bonnie Rowlett, secretary; treasurer, Tom Henry.

Warren, N. Taulman, N. Randell, N. Huttzell, D. Chapman, J. Kuppler, S. Schmidlap, W. Smallwood, M. Server, C. Stites, P. Schuring

Projects, projects, and more and more projects kept the SWHS F.H.A. hopping during the year. The annual FHA Sweetheart Dance was the main activity, but this was far from the least. Many of the girls baby sat at PTA meetings so the mothers could participate. The FHA sponsored a film on alcohol and drugs and their affects.

With a new sponsor, new games, and many new members, the Southwestern GAA had a very active and fun-filled year. Billiards, bowling, skating, and swimming were just a few of the many activities that the GAA enjoyed. Miss Porter, sponsor, is a graduate of Indiana State, and this was her first year at Southwestern. Although bowling and billiards were the main attractions, a few of the braver souls attempted skating and swimming. Swimming, which was new on the list of activities, was enjoyed by the girls. The meetings, which were held on Wednesday afternoons, gave the girls a chance to get together with friends, as well as keep physically fit. Sometimes the girls stayed at the school to practice up on archery or gymnastics.

Even with all these activities, the GAA found time to sponsor sock hops after some of the home ballgames. Track and field meets early in the year gave the boy's track team a run for their money, and a bowling tourney was planned for later. Officers for the 1968-69 GAA were: April Daugherty, president; Jana Cook, vice-pres.; Betty Wehner, treasurer; Brenda Shepherd, secretary.

Right: Senior member Sherry Adams displays perfect bowling form as she gets ready to bowl a strike. Sherry held one of the highest bowling averages recorded during the school year.

Band Uses Gym While Awaiting New Room;

Concerts, basketball games, and a Christmas program kept the high school band active throughout the 1968-69 school year. Band practice was first period of every school day, with fifth period sometimes used for special practice. Although the band is mostly high school students, many junior high students participate in the band.

Left; April Daugherty follow the conductor's score while directing the pep band. Below; Flutists John Schwarm and Beth Haverkamp aid each other in pre-concert tuning. Bottom; The pep band accompanies the cheer block in singing the school song.

Schedule Includes Ballgames, Yule Program

Playing at half time for the home basketball games gave the band a chance to try out new songs for a critical audience. The band also performed many old-time favorites at the annual Christmas program here at Southwestern. The S.W.H.S. band was one of the area high school bands who entertained at the Farm City Week held in November at the Madison gym. Instructed by Mr. Ballenger, Southwestern's band was one to be proud of, and hopes are for an even bigger schedule next year.

Democracy in Action

Top; Reverend Leroy Fassett, of the Hanover Presbyterian Church, speaks to the student body at the Christmas assembly sponsored by Student Council.

Above; Cheryl Rogers explains the procedure of operating a voting machine to Jim Adams during the mock election held in October.

Working to promote the best interests of the school, the SWHS Student Council planned and carried out many activities. To promote spirit for the basketball season, the Student Council sold booster buttons and held Spirit Week, with prizes given to the classes that showed the most spirit.

Since there was a national election in November, the Student Council sponsored a mock election to give students a chance to vote for their favorite candidates and to learn how to operate the voting machines.

At Christmas, the annual "Toys for Tots" sock hop was held during the activity period. The admission fee to the dance was new toys which went to needy children of the community.

Activities

Besides Classes We . . .

enjoyed convocations, dances, and assemblies. Patti Foster beams proudly as she is crowned the 1968-69 PTA Fair queen. Russella Davis and Gary Schmidlap share a dance after Russella was chosen queen of FHA Sweetheart Dance. Couples at the annual Sweetheart Dance try out the latest steps to the music of the Romens. Debbie Weber and Janet Rogers examine the writing on the balloons at the Sweetheart Dance.

Enjoyment was plentiful. The Melody Masters quartet sang spirituals; a Hanover College drama group presented the play "A Doctor in Spite of Himself", during assemblies. There were trips to the Allison Plant for the juniors and seniors, and sock hops after the home ballgames. The freshmen and seniors even had their arms pricked by a little needle testing for tuberculosis germs.

February 21, 1969 was a big night for Southwestern. It was the final regular game of the 1968-69 basketball season. Southwestern won, and the 1967-68 basketball queen, Linda Leland, gave up her reign to the newly chosen queen. During halftime of the game with Crothersville, Miss Peggy Schuring took over as the new basketball queen. Peggy, a sophomore, was chosen by the team. Other candidates were Sharon Manaugh, senior; Martha Craig, junior; and Debby Shepherd, a freshman. With the win over Crothersville, and a proud, happy, new queen, it was a night that won't soon be forgotten by Southwestern, and especially by Peggy.

The 1969 sectional field consisted of seven teams after the loss of Deputy High. The drawings were almost identical to last year, pairing Silver Creek against Shawe and Madison against Charlestown on the opening night. The second night saw our Rebels taking on Henryville, with New Washington drawing the bye.

Southwestern had eight seniors in the lineup for their last two varsity games. The Rebels captured an easy victory over Henryville. But in the semi-final game the Rebels lost a hard-fought battle to Madison, 55-65.

Leading the way were seniors Tom Brawner, who scored a total of 38 points, and Jim Finnegan, who tallied 44. Silver Creek went on in the finals to stomp Madison, 82 to 58.

Baseball is fast becoming a major sport at SWHS. Since the 1968-69 season, the team has played in a split-season, starting in the fall and ending in the spring. The fall portion of the season consists of ORVC games, while the spring features the state baseball tournament. Spring 1969 marks the third year for this annual event, which is becoming more popular each year.

With many of the starters from last years' squad gone, the Rebels tried to build a solid team. Hitting was a major problem with the squad. Pitching was above average, as well as the team's fielding average. Rick Persinger, who suffered a broken jaw in the spring of 1968, recuperated from the injury and led the team with a .400 batting average. Fine pitching was provided by Bob Gray, Dave Stewart, and Jesse Taylor.

New dugouts, a water-system and electrical facilities were built by the Hanover Optimists Club.

The 1968 SWHS cross country season was composed of exhausting practice, self-denial and a determination to win. The team gave a good competitive showing despite the fact that the majority of Southwestern's thirteen runners had two years' or less experience.

In a regular season meet, Southwestern defeated Vevay to place first, and the Rebels defeated four rivals to finish in fifth place at the ORVC meet in Milan.

The team will lose four seniors this year: Mike Foley, Gary Furnish, Alan Hutton, and Larry Jones.

It was Coach Weber's fourth season as cross country coach and his next season appears even more promising.

Of all sports in Indiana, basketball is the most popular with high schools. Southwestern High is no exception to this statement.

The hard-hustling Rebels of 1968-69 were composed of a team that consisted of eleven players. The squad had their ups and downs during the season but they never lost the spirit to win.

As a highlight of the campaign, the Rebels were runners-up in the Jefferson County Invitational Tourney. In the tournament the Rebels conquered Switzerland Co. and Austin, before tumbling to Shawe in the tourney final. SWHS host for the annual event held at Madison gym.

Of the boys who represented SWHS on the team, Allen Ary and Nathan Davis carried the spirit of the sophomores. Bob Manaugh was the star in the hearts of the juniors. Rick and Tom Brawner, Jim Singer, Mike Foley, Alan Hutton, Larry Jones, John Schwarm, and Jim Finnegan won the cheers of the seniors. Head Coach Stan Weber and Assistant Coach Stan Nay directed the Rebel team.

The junior varsity team got a lot of needed experience this year. Composed mostly of freshmen and sophomores, the team posted a 6-11 record. Freddie Eaglin and Nate Davis led the team; both moved to varsity positions later in the year. The future looks bright for coming J.V. teams. The Freshman team wasn't too successful in the winning column, but they had many close games, many lost by only two points. Their record was 6-13. All of the boys are looking forward to filling J.V. spots next season.

A Senior Is . . .

the beginning and the end. He has reached the end of realities and fantasies. He is at the end of adolescence, the end of divine ignorance. He looks back, perhaps, and smiles at pleasant memories and some not so pleasant. He looks ahead at the uncertainties of his future, his new beginning, his rebirth.

Being a senior brought many tears of desperation (Anna Traugott); was boosting school spirit by making hoops (Wilma Ary and Pat Leep) and posters (Jerry Adams); and was putting many hours into cafeteria assistance (Susan Davis).

Being a Senior included encouraging a speaker; receiving awards such as the one the juniors and seniors tied for during Spirit Week (Sharon Manaugh, Sr. and John Johnson, Jr.); participating in senior pep rallies; fighting for the team (Mike Foley); and going to the games.

Being a Senior involved visiting the State Legislature, running school government and holding mock elections.

Being a Senior was taking advantage of the library facilities (Jo Ann Hubbard); participating in class discussion (Anna Traugott); working on the Rebian (Gary Furnish); and listening most attentively in their required classes (Debbie Inskeep).

Being a Senior meant preparing for the future, facing realities and going out into society to build a new world and a new tomorrow.
