Break On Through

Break on Through

The Rebian

Student Publications- Southwestern High School- Hanover, IN 47243

As the new year approached, prophecies of gloom and doom abounded. Many people believed the world would end. Other folks predicted major disasters--food shortages, utility outages, and terrorist bombings. The Y2K scare portended computer crashes and hackings that would incapacitate the nation and perhaps the world. But when the ball dropped on Times Square at midnight, we truly broke on through to the other side. The year 2000 dawned with relatively few glitches. Southwestern High School continued to break on through to the next millennium. We looked with optimism at what tomorrow could bring. Despite the grim prognos-tics, the year 2000 was not an ending to our lives. Instead, the end to one century heralded the beginning of new century, with a chance for a brighter future. We know from this point forward that our lives will truly be changed forever. So, now we take this opportunity to reminisce about the events of a notable year. Looking back on the past school year, we, at Southwestern High School, remember all the great times we had. In spite of all the solemn news forecasts, we moved ahead with a sense of pride. For we truly did Break On Through To The Other Side.

Big smiles and high hopes are always on the minds of sophomores Erin Williams and Heather Jackson. They stop briefly to pose before they continue skipping to their next class.

Freshmen Brandon Stucker and Tim Gray look at each other as if they know something Cody Andrew and Michael Eden don't as the two focus on the camera after lunch.

Senior Josh Myers (Radar) shows his true love for the Rebel team by sporting face paint, Senior shirt, and Confederate flag at the first pep session of the year.

Breaking into a new school year wasn't enough for us. We got to enter a new century as well.

Missy Pelsor concentrates on opening her straw before eating her delicious lunch prepared by our lovely cafeteria ladies. It's the favorite chili again!

Richie Abbott (the Rich) is caught once again wearing sun glasses inside. Is his future so bright that he has to wear shades?

Seniors Jay Liston and Seth Leland show how to act like true studs as they pose for a picture in yearbook. Could they be the next GQ models?

The Class of 2000

There is nothing but smiles and bugs when the seniors realize that this is last time they'll ever have their picture taken together.

We mark a New Beginning

■ "The class that marked an End with a new Beginning" was nothing but appropriate for the motto of the Class of 2000. Yes, they did end one century and begin another, but more importantly they ended their high school careers ready for a new start. Although they will never forget the wonderful memories from Southwestern High School, this group of seniors was ready to move forward to the eventful lives ahead of them.

■ The Class of 2000 was a competitive group of people who loved to have fun. They won Spirit Week during both junior and senior years. They stayed up until 2:00 in the morning to finish banners and decorations all while having a great time. This class had much to be proud of.

■ The seniors were a very intelligent, athletic, and talented group of people. Many of this class's students went on to college. Some participated in sports while in high school. Most were involved in some way or another. The Class of 2000 will always be remembered for the things they did. But more importantly, they will be remembered for who they were. They cared for each other and were always there to lend a helping hand. They had wonderful spirit and sense of pride that will stay with them for the rest of their lives. The Class of 2000 will live on at Southwestern and in the hearts of all who knew them.

Troy "the college boy" Davis sees himself breaking out of high school and into college ahead of the class. There are most definitely many sides to this trio of Ryan Earl, Chase Crafton, and Van Crafton.

People breaking the mold

Block scheduling proved to be one of the biggest break throughs in class scheduling. Students were allowed to select eight classes for the year instead of six. To some this was a welcome sight, to others it proved to be a bit more than they were prepared for. To afford the students the choices of the block some changes had to be made. The changes had to be made on all levels. Scheduling which is always difficult took on new meaning.

New classes were offered. Teachers prepared new courses. But perhaps the biggest challenge for both students and teachers alike was the 85 minutes between the bells.

■ Not surprisingly the people of SHS met the challenge.

■ Many of the new classes were surprising well received. New approaches to teaching were used. Students did more in the classroom and out of the classroom. Students were even allowed to do job shadowing.

Now what do you need?

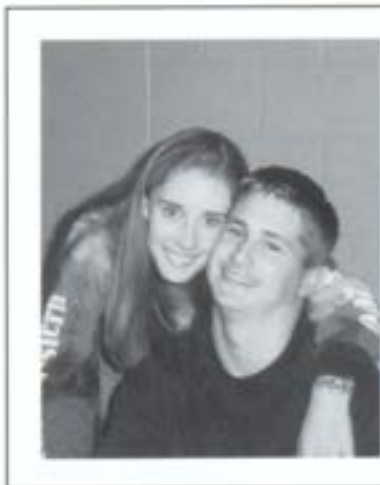

One of the favorite adults amongst the students and staff is Mr. Tom Potter. Potter is the first one called to fix the locker, control the heat, unlock the car, give a cookie or to share a joke.

■ Students that attend part of the day at Vocational school won awards at the state level in different areas. Anna York, Myrle Salomon, and Zach Bruce represented SHS with pride.

■ Sometimes the work in the academic classes led to involvement in clubs, which perhaps led to more involvement in their grade level activities.

Two can do it

Blair Hicks and Chad Watson pause for a drink. Holly Adams and Andrew Lichlyter share a smile between classes. Principal Denise Bessler confers with Mrs. Kaye Abplanalp at the sports banquet.

The Class of 2001 consists of people. Although we are the largest class in the high school we hold a special kind of friendship. Everyone knows everyone. We have been together since we started kindergarten in 1987. Now we are bringing in the new millennium together.

Being juniors, this year was our first prom together. It is tradition for the juniors to plan the Jr./Sr. prom for the seniors. To earn money we sold magazines and worked the concession stand at the junior varsity and varsity boys basketball games. As a class we chose "Amazed" by Lonestar to be the theme. We picked glasses, invitations, colors, decorations, and much more.

Grade 11

Juniors

Class of 2001

Our junior year has come and gone. We picked yellow, purple, and orange for the class colors. The yellow rose was selected for our flower. Almost 100% of us even ordered long-sleeved tie-dyed shirts. The back of the shirts has the Class of 2001 motto on it: "Most look up and admire the stars. A champion climbs a mountain and grabs one."

Spirit unites

Rocky

Spirit Week in the fall brought the Juniors out in droves to knock out the other grades during the week. One of the highlights in the week of events was winning the skit. After the competition during the week the juniors performed the skit for the student body.

Never too busy to demonstrate their school spirit whether it be during the assembly or for the camera are Amber Sedam, Amber Goebel, Kasie Pettitt, and Jesi Brindley.

Learning to use recognize and use each others strengths is important.

Leadership is important

Building on each other

Creating a sense of unity

Class officers for the juniors were busy from the beginning of the year to the end. The class officers are treasurer Tyler Deuser, vice president Nick Kindelsperger, secretary Amy Bomholt and president Jennifer Kikta. The year was filled with lots of meetings: magazines, t-shirts, prom, decisions, decisions, and more decisions.

Prom dominated the mind of many juniors as it has in preceeding years. For many juniors everything seemed to be leading up to the April 22 event at the college but there were actually other reasons for the meetings and fundraisers. The money would hopefully be enough to follow them on to planning graduation and the eternal meetings would bring about team work.

Time to reflect and draw is something junior Adam Brown enjoys doing. The art club worked on the mural in the cafeteria. The art classes assist during spirit week with decorations and window paintings. The perfecting of a talent is something Brown enjoys doing.

The sophomore class is growing closer as they grow closer to their final year at Southwestern. They will find quickly realize they need to enjoy their high school years. They need to sit back and take time to have fun in their teenage lives before they leave high school. Remember each day you wake up you have a choice to be happy or not to be happy. That is the one choice that we all have... the one thing we have control over.

Working on "class" projects, whether it was for the sophomores as a whole or an individual classroom assignment, offered a new twist to the sophomores with the school using block scheduling. Information was easier to disseminate when everyone had English each day, and since most of the students could not drive; getting together proved to be a difficult task.

Class 2002

Another school year is coming to an end. For some that is good, for others it is not so good. The sophomores this year seem to had a good year. One more step closer to graduation is how they like to see it. Like each class before them they seem to be in a rush to leave high school. But they will look back at this group shot and have some fond memories of Spirit Week, Pep Sessions, sporting events, class projects and the ultimate-- being able to drive.

Amanda Allen and Brianne Lyons help during Spirit Week with Student Councils food drive. The students collected thousands of cans and donated them to families in need.

The sophomore class excels in more areas than one. The class has students who are talented in every area at the high school. Finding their groove in activities isn't as difficult as last year. This year brings the excitement and anticipation of driving.

The sophomore class rallies at the pep rally. Each grade enjoy watches the others skits. Ian Moore and Seth Melton are no exception. Industrial technology classes seem to hold the kids interest. Francine Hancock enjoys some encouragement from Senior Jenna Daugherty. Sam Boldery consults her classmates on her project.

As the class of 2003 broke out of the Junior High, they entered a whole new world filled with freedom, older kids, and lots more homework. This year they were met with overwhelming challenges. But together, as a class, they pulled through. They met those challenges head on and conquered them one by one. Individually and collectively they made it through their first year of high school.

Breaking the old patterns... forming new friends... keeping old friends... creating study habits... balancing homework and after school activities... becoming involved... making Southwestern theirs.

beginning now

The Class of 2003 has been together since kindergarten. For some of the kids it has been even longer. While these ten or eleven years may seem like forever, the time will pass all too quickly-- just ask an adult. Take a look around at your classmates and remember some of the events from your first year in high school. Remember breaking that invisible barrier with the upperclassmen, remember the first spirit week, remember those long, long class periods with the new block scheduling, remember the freshman year!

Involvement is the key

Join something

Although many members of the freshman class had participated in activities in the junior high the quantity increased dramatically as they crossed the barrier that was divided by the gym. Most met this new opportunity, becoming active.

Julie Brawner found the key to unlocking the door from the Junior High to the High School. The key is involvement. Brawner although quiet made her presence known on the basketball court. Brawner played for the Lady Rebels under Coach Cheatham.

The challenge is finding oneself and learning how to work together.

To break through to the other side takes help, and help we had. Whether we realized it at the time or not, we needed and received assistance from our friends, parents, teachers, sponsors, coaches, secretaries, custodians, cafeteria workers, bus drivers, administration, and even people that were here before us. The formidable Delbert O. King died in December of 1999. Mr. King has had the biggest impact on Southwestern Jr.-Sr. High School of any individual. Although he served as principal for over 30 years, he is best known for his laid-back professional approach to running the school. There is no one, teacher or student, that was not affected by his assistance and support. The warm and caring Mr. King helped us all break through, and he will continue to do so even after his death.
